    2. In October 1979, responsibility for the ███████ type of analytical work was transferred to NFAC/OGCR, and after a brief trial period the program is becoming operational. The software will continue to be an essential tool for this analytical work, and the annual maintenance fees will have to be paid routinely to avoid losing the program license and to ensure that important program revisions can be added as they become available. The "maintenance" paid for in this manner pertains only to enhancements in the software packages in question, and does not cover such items as program modifications to accommodate Agency/ODP computer system upgrades. (S/NF/NC)

    3. Because these extended maintenance fees will be a recurring expense for regular maintenance of software programs in the central processing library, it would seem appropriate that ODP assume responsibility for the payments, rather than continuing to pay these fees from NFAC external analysis funds, which are extremely scarce in both FY 1980 and FY 1981. REMARKS

Yes: This really is for a single user application program. If it is done at all it should be out of Applications. This is not a processing service. We could not write Sole Source or monitor contract (both required if we pay).

I Don't see why we should not Pay for it. Am I missing something?
Do other users pay for Annual Software

costs?
